AP-35 Projects – 91.220(d)

Introduction

The City starts its third year of its five-year strategic plan building on the strengths of using systems to implement many projects funded with Con Plan dollars, and chooses projects that complement its overall strategy of reducing homelessness, increasing the stock of affordable housing, and improving livability. Those systems include the Affordable Housing Managed Pipeline, Aging Services Delivery System, BusinessSource System, FamilySource System, and the Domestic Violence and Human Trafficking system. The City works closely with various nonprofit subrecipients, developers, general contractors, and various City departments, as well as local government entities like the school district and agencies in the County to implement the various projects. Businesses selected for economic development assistance are vetted through an underwriting process implemented by the Economic and Workforce Development Dept.

Describe the reasons for allocation priorities and any obstacles to addressing underserved needs

Reasons for Allocation Priorities

The City of Los Angeles acknowledges the hardships of its residents; as such, it is committed to reducing and prevention homelessness, displacement, and crisis experiences as well as providing opportunities for low-income stakeholders to prosper with living wage jobs, livable neighborhoods, and services that enhance their lives. Projects that directly or closely address these goals are prioritized.

Program Year 46
2020-2021 Annual Action Plan

Geographically, projects that seek to uplift locations with high concentrations of lower-income individuals are also granted priority. Areas with high concentrations of homeless individuals, the Los Angeles Promise Zones, and the Racially/Ethnically Concentrated Areas of Poverty (R/ECAPs) are all locations that are granted priority, as projects in those areas would offer the most improvement. While not defined the same, there is great overlap of all three types of areas within certain parts of the city.

Additionally, due to the increasingly urgent need for both social and climatological change, the Mayor has embraced the United Nation's Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) and identified six of these goals to closely align with the goals of the Consolidated Plan. These goals focus on the elimination of poverty, improving prospects and educational resources for children, increasing the supply of livable-wage jobs and economic opportunity, reducing inequalities across the city, creating sustainable communities, and improving our institutions through a focus on peace, justice, and strength.

Obstacle of Cost-Burdened Renters

With the average rent for a one-bedroom apartment at more than $2,000 a month, today's cost of housing outweighs wages, making it harder for residents to live a sustainable life. According to LAHSA, "An L.A. renter earning minimum wage ($13.25/hour) would need to work 79 hours per week to afford a one bedroom apartment"¹. The majority of city residents are renters, and nearly 60% pay more than 30% of their gross monthly income for housing costs; 31% pay more than half their income for housing. The longstanding mismatch of incomes and housing costs continues, as rents and home prices rise faster than incomes.

Because so many renters in Los Angeles are cost-burdened, a great number of Angelenos are at risk of losing their housing and possibly entering homelessness. Per LAHSA's report on the 2020 Greater Los Angeles Homeless Count, 66,433 people in Los Angeles County are experiencing homelessness, representing a 12.7% rise from 2019. The City of Los Angeles saw a 14.2% rise to 41,2902. As thousands of people were permanently housed, thousands more fell into homelessness. The correlations between medical emergency costs, loss of jobs or temporary employment, and low wages have contributed to 53% of persons experiencing homelessness being homeless for the first time due to economic hardship.

Obstacle of Experiencing Homelessness & Maintaining Employment

When housing is insecure, it is a major challenge to maintain employment. In order to have successful employment, people need a place to rest, an address to receive mail, and a place to attend to their hygiene. When people are at-risk of becoming or are homeless, chances for survival in the workplace is diminished. Homeless individuals face a litany of prejudices and may face issues with insufficient food, low energy from lack of quality sleep, poor health from a stressful environment, and hygiene issues from lack of access to cleaning facilities. All of these issues compound to make keeping a job difficult, further exacerbating a bad situation. To address these needs, numerous homeless assistance organizations realize stable employment is a pillar to maintaining secure housing, and in addition to providing temporary housing, also offer job skills training and job placement for their clients.

LAHSA 2019 data shows there are 16,528 people living in cars³, and many are families or people who work, and most of them are new to experiencing homelessness. Lease Up LA by PATH, is a program created in 2018 to collaborate with property owners and managers by connecting them with financial incentives and other tools to make housing homeless persons easier and more appealing. The challenge of expedited housing placement continues, as the program takes up to four months to help homeless families in these circumstances.⁴

Obstacles to Affordable Housing

Although voters approved Proposition HHH to help build more supportive housing to prevent and reduce homelessness, the City of Los Angeles has faced some challenges in the first two years. The current building boom has increased competition for land, labor and materials. Also, the effect of new U.S. tariffs on Canadian lumber and foreign-made steel, and labor costs has created obstacles. One of the greatest challenge is working with the developers to meet timely needs to build housing units. The going estimates for an HHH project from start to finish are three to six years⁵. Additionally, while the City is building new affordable housing, it must also contend with properties not renewing affordability contracts, old affordable housing being demolished for market-rate properties, affordable housing falling into disrepair, the perpetually rising cost of living, Nimbyism and finite funding.

Obstacles for Older Adults

The Los Angeles region's older adult population is already larger than the older adult population of 41 states, and is expected to nearly double to over 2 million by 2030. This rapidly growing and very diverse population presents new challenges. While the population is living longer, for some it means living longer in poor health. Despite overall gains in life expectancy, there are populations that continue to experience health disparities as they age. Improved access to health and social services that promote and protect health is needed. From data surveyed of Los Angeles City and County employees age 60 and over, they are "not sure" if a number of health and social services exist. Access to services can be vastly improved by better outreach and information about the services and programs that exist in the community⁶.

Obstacles for Domestic Violence & Human Trafficking Survivors

Survivors of domestic violence often find themselves without a roof over their heads after experiencing tumultuous relationships, and there is a need to prevent the downfall from domestic violence to homelessness. When seeking safe and quality housing, they are often challenged with being denied due to lack of proper identity, poor credit, no past rental history because their name does not appear on leases. There is a need for funding with more flexible requirements to provide temporary housing assistance for this population. Also of concern is how domestic violence survivors are viewed by society.

Likewise, human trafficking survivors are faced with similar circumstances and often experience homelessness from encountering criminal records due to the activities previously forced upon them. Human traffickers force victims to break the law, and these criminal records can often take months to expunge. These same barriers hinder victims while seeking employment, making it more difficult to become independent from the abuser. While a CDBG-funded shelter for human trafficking survivors was established in 2018, due to the safety requirements, survivors are sometimes unable to meet certain criteria of the emergency and transitional shelters. And the need far outweighs current capacity.

AP-50 Geographic Distribution – 91.220(f)

Description of the geographic areas of the entitlement (including areas of low-income and minority concentration) where assistance will be directed

N/A

Geographic Distribution

Table 8 - Geographic Distribution

Target Area	Percentage of Funds

Rationale for the priorities for allocating investments geographically

The City is not following a delimited geographic investment plan, but certain programs and projects may be prioritized according to their location in the following areas:

Homeless Population

According to the 2020 Greater LA Homeless Count, certain areas have a higher concentration of persons experiencing homelessness, primarily in the Central, East and South areas.

City of Los Angeles Promise Zones

The city has two federally-designated Promise Zones (PZs): The Los Angeles Promise Zone in Central LA, approved in January 2013, and the South Los Angeles Transit Empowerment Zone approved in June 2016. The areas are targeted with comprehensive neighborhood revitalization efforts to achieve the goals of improving educational opportunities, creating jobs, increasing economic development, improving public safety, leveraging private capital, preserving and expanding affordable housing and reducing poverty. The PZs demonstrate the effectiveness of cross-sector collaboration and achieve goals by coordinating investments between the public and private sectors, strengthening interdepartmental working relationships, and connecting with the philanthropic, nonprofit, and academic communities. The ultimate goal of the PZ is to create a dynamic, safe, and livable community with high academic achievement and strong economic growth over the ten-year implementation period and beyond. PZ programs that align with this Plan include the support of small business and entrepreneurship and the Homeless Youth Summit.

Racially/Ethnically Concentrated Areas of Poverty (R/ECAPs) and Neighborhoods of Opportunity

The 2017 Assessment of Fair Housing analyzed a variety of fair housing issues including patterns of integration and segregation of members of protected classes; racially or ethnically concentrated areas of poverty

Program Year 46

2020-2021 Annual Action Plan

(R/ECAPs) within Los Angeles and the region; disparities in access to opportunity in education, employment, transportation, environmental health, and exposure to poverty; and disproportionate housing needs. R/ECAPs are based on census tracts and defined by HUD as, “areas with a non-White population of 50% or more,” and where “40% or more of individuals live at or below the poverty limit or has a poverty rate three times the average poverty rate of the metropolitan area, whichever threshold is lower.” While many areas within the city meet the criteria for R/ECAPs, the vast majority of these R/ECAPs are clustered in Central, South, and East LA. South Los Angeles accounts for a particularly large proportion of city residents living in census tracts with extreme rates of poverty. In 2010, 387,914 people lived in areas classified as R/ECAPs, which was slightly more than 10% of the city’s population as of that date.

The AFH describes neighborhoods of opportunity that have proficient schools, low poverty rates, and better environmental health scores, as shown on the maps included in this section. Those maps also show that the R/ECAPs, outlined in red, are far from the neighborhoods of opportunity. The AFH calls for greater access to neighborhoods of opportunity by lower income residents of the city and for increased investment in R/ECAPs.

Discussion

The needs for Con Plan-funded assistance are citywide and the opportunities are also citywide. As the 2017 AFH discusses, where one lives has a substantial effect on mental and physical health, education, crime levels, and economic opportunity. Urban areas that are more residentially segregated by race and income tend to have lower levels of upward economic mobility than other areas. Concentrated poverty is also associated with higher crime rates and worse health outcomes. However, these areas may also offer some opportunities as well. Individuals may actively choose to settle in neighborhoods containing R/ECAPs due to the availability of affordable housing and proximity to job centers. Overall, identifying R/ECAPs is important to better understand entrenched patterns of segregation and poverty. The R/ECAP areas and other areas of greatest need may be prioritized in considering the allocation of investments.
